MISS MAY DESMOND

May Desmond, the recent augment to the Poli Stock Company, capably emonstrated her ability to captivate players at her initial performances as ollice Parsons in "The Regeneration" Miss Desmond's incorporation in the company was received with every manifestation of pleasure 2n the part of her auditory, her winning personality, her vivid interpretation and her commendable articulation effecting the requisite impression on a critical house.

The little actresses native prettiness is enhanced by intellectuality, her siender figure all that has been accorded the summa cum laude since the introduction of the toilette princesse. The evinces a readiness of perception and a familiarity with the esoteric witcheries of femininity that supplement admirably the stage business in cident to a production.

Miss Desmond's histronic experience began in Niagrar Fells as a member of the National Stock Company at the Chestmut Stock Company at the Chestmut Stock Company at the Chestmut Street theatre in Philadelphia.

Here she was associated with Marion Barney, the never-to-be-forgotten favorite of Poli's own, Peter Lang, a local star last summer, end J. Sammond Daily who has acquired an enviable reputation during the current run by the cleverness and versatility of his enactions.

Referring to Miss Demond's performance of the fineteenth ultimate, the Philadelphia Telegraph says; "A Night Off' goes off like a gun with the rise of the first curtain and continues to explode with rapid-fire spontaneity until the end of the fourth act. It could hardly be otherwise with George D. Parker, Peter Lang, May Desmond and the like in charge of the principal roles, Miss Desmond's meteoric ascent of the ladder of popularity as a member of the Orpheum Gongany last year is well remembered by all, and the keenest pleasure was felt last night in seeing her more than repeat her finest previous effort. As Susan, Professor Babbit's maid, she was better than a funny powder."

Miss Desmond is cast for a prominent role in "The Squamman,"

Without any fuss and feather, a arge number of Bridgeport's ministers haw witnessed "The Regeneration" at Poll's during the week. They all seem to be of one mind that this play not only elevates the stage, but it teaches a high moral lesson, not to be found in many plays now being presented. The play has also drawn very large audiences at every performance, in two matinees during the week, people have been turned away, so great has been the demand for seats. The sale is targe for these last three days.
